MASTER OF JOURNALISM

Carleton University is THE place to study journalism in Canada.

Are you driven by curiosity? A desire to reveal, explain, and tell truthful stories?

For more than 20 years, Carleton has offered one of the best Master of Journalism (MJ) programs in the country.

There are two points of entry into the MJ. Most applicants will be admitted to Year One of the two-year program. The first year provides intensive foundational training in print, broadcast and online journalism, alongside courses on journalism law, journalism theory, professional practices and reporting methods. In the second year, students combine subject-specific workshop courses with electives and specialized seminars designed to complement their capstone Master’s Research Project.

Applicants with professional journalism experience or degrees in journalism may be admitted directly into Year Two. These students may pursue a degree path in journalism studies, taking an aspect of journalism practice or the news media as a subject of analysis, or a suite of professional coursework options selected in consultation with the Supervisor of Graduate Studies. They will complete a master’s thesis or a master’s research project, as appropriate.

In both cases, students work with talented faculty whose professional reputations are unmatched in the country.

The school runs an apprenticeship program involving more than 50 media companies across the country — from the Globe and Mail to CTVNews.ca to Canadian Geographic — as well as the communication arms of organizations as diverse as the RCMP and the National Gallery of Canada. These placements can be completed during the academic year or over the summer.

Students can apply for media internships in such places as Sierra Leone, Burundi, Kenya, Cote d’Ivorie, Senegal and Rwanda through the Centre for Media and Transitional Societies, which is based in our School.

Students can also combine their journalism degree with a specialization in African Studies.
